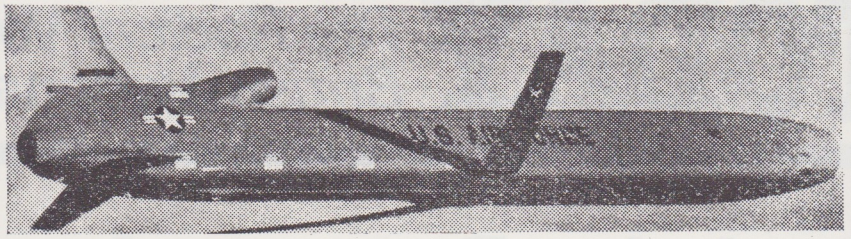
Issue No. 18

'NO' TO CRUISE!



IN December the United States Air Force will install at two of their military bases in Britain — Greenham Common and Molesworth — a total of 160 Cruise missiles. This will supplement the already considerable arsenal of nuclear weaponry that they deploy in our country.

The USA has a total of 103 military installations in the UK and has some 30,000 servicemen stationed here. The American military presence in Britain includes air force bases at which are stationed F-111 fighter bombers which have a nuclear strike capability.

In fact Britain is nothing more than a giant aircraft carrier for the American military machine — a giant parking lot for their strike aircraft, nuclear bombs and spy planes.

The siting and deployment of Cruise missiles in Britain makes us a prime target for a Soviet counterstrike. In addition to this, the decision to launch these nuclear weapons rests not with the British people or the British government — but with the American President. His finger alone is on the button.

The situation is even more frightening when you consider that the USA and USSR are now talking in terms of a "limited" nuclear war. A war — which by agreement of the super-powers — would be limited to the territory of their allies and satellites; a nuclear battle-ground safely distanced from Washington and Moscow.

We have no desire to die in a nuclear conflagration between two economic systems that we despise equally. We no more want American military bases in our country than we do Russian military bases.

The cardinal aim of the National Front is the restoration of National Sovereignty. We can only be considered a sovereign nation if we have total control and command over all military forces and weapons on British soil.

The American military presence in Britain must come to an end, and we must also withdraw from the US-dominated NATO alliance.

Instead we must establish a truly independent British nuclear deterrent and adopt a position of armed neutrality.

That is the only guarantee for Britain's independence and survival.

BETTER QUALITY—HIGHER SALES

AS from this issue we are launching two new series which are designed to improve the overall quality of the magazine. These are "RACE — What The Scientists Say" and "Naughty But Nice". It is hoped that these two new series, along with "Roots" which was launched in the last issue, will prove as popular as some of the older and more established regular features.

We are also pleased to announce that the print-run of Nationalism Today is being increased by a further two-hundred as from this issue. This makes NT the largest selling Nationalist magazine in the country.

WHAT THEIR PAPERS SAY

MORE TESTING OF NEGRO INTELLIGENCE

YET ANOTHER survey has shown that West Indian children do badly in school and that the old liberal excuses about "culture biased tests" and "deprivation" just can't explain why. The intelligence score of the Blacks actually goes down sharply between the ages of 8 and 12. They fall far behind other children and "by 16, the West Indians are, for all practical purposes, already ineligible for higher education and professional training."

This devastating picture of intellectual failure comes from a detailed study of more than 1,000 children in a Midlands town. It was carried out by an American team headed by Sandra Scarr, professor of psychology at Yale University.

The tests show that when they start school at five, West Indian children are doing just as well as other racial groups. This gives the lie to the idea that Blacks do badly because the tests are in some way biased against them. For it is only later, when White and Asian children continue to develop their abilities that the West Indians fall behind.

According to Professor Scarr: "The trouble starts when schools expect West Indian children to use more abstract reasoning and they have to go beyond what is literally there in a book, to make inferences about what the author intends. Similarly, in maths, they have to move from concrete to abstract operations.

"They are not so persistent as other children. They don't approach reasoning problems with the same tenacity. Why I don't know."

Scarr was nevertheless quick to protect her well paid job prospects by assuring worried liberals that "genetic differences explain nothing." She went on to make the totally unfounded suggestion that the stupidity of West Indian schoolchildren may be due to the fact that, out of her survey sample, only 59% of the West Indian children lived in households where the father was present and a massive 63% were illegitimate!

The Voice

"WHITES need not apply" is the message of this advert, placed in a London newspaper recently by the London Borough of Brent. However, considering that the advert was placed in The Voice, a newspaper which is only read by West Indians, the Blacks-only clause was hardly necessary. After all, how many unemployed Whites are likely to be regular readers of a Black newspaper!

In the same issue of The Voice which published the advertisement from Brent Council, there was a full page advert from the London Borough of Hackney informing local Blacks of all the jobs available in their area. Since none of the many unemployed Whites in Hackney are likely to see which jobs are available they are not likely to apply. This is what Hackney Council coyly calls "equal opportunity"!

Caribbean Times

IN issue 16 we exposed the fact that, according to prominent Black community leader Darcus Howe, most Blacks in Britain support the IRA. Further evidence of the attitude of Blacks in Britain to the country which provides them with homes, jobs, and social security cheques has been provided by the Caribbean Times.

This leading paper of West Indian Blacks in the UK, replying to a reader's letter complaining that the paper had seemed to back Britain during the Falklands War, made its position crystal clear in an "Editor's Note":

"This paper has never supported the invasion of the Falklands by Britain. We feel it was illegally occupied 150 years ago and, irrespective of what the present citizens say, it belongs to Argentina, who will in our lifetime be legally occupying it again."

But this evidence of hatred of Britain and support for our country's enemies amongst Blacks currently living here should come as no surprise. After all, they aren't British, they evidently don't feel British, so why should we expect them to owe any loyalty to Britain? Fair enough. But why should they expect to live in Britain, if that's how they feel about the country?

THEIR MASTER'S VOICE...

IN the final days of the recent General Election campaign, as their vilification and hysterical abuse of each other was reaching a crescendo, the leaders of the three Establishment parties – Thatcher, Foot and Steel – suddenly became touchingly unanimous as they queued up to sign an important document on a crucial area of national policy.

The statement pledged the three warring party leaders and their respective "Alternatives for Britain," to a declaration that:

"We are determined to defend Britain's multi-cultural society, to oppose the evils of racialism, and to promote greater equality of opportunity. We are committed to implementing measures to ensure that racial discrimination" – i.e. putting British people first in their own country – "and racial disadvantage are removed from our society. We are committed to ensuring that our education system – including school curricula – is developed to take full account of the multicultural nature of modern British society."

The statement the leaders of all the major Establishment parties so meekly endorsed was drawn up for their signature by the "Joint Committee Against Racialism". The JCAR is a thinly-disguised "front" organisation for the Board of Deputies of "British" Jews.

Who said the recent election marked the widest choice of governments before the British people in a long time?

SAVE VILLAGE SCHOOLS!

THE VILLAGE SCHOOL is under attack! In the first four months of this year alone the Education Secretary approved the closure of 56 village schools in England and Wales.

Now Mrs. Molly Stiles, national co-ordinator of the National Association for the Support of Small Schools, has revealed that rural education authorities have been holding meetings to vote through the closure of village schools during the summer holidays. As she explained: "Several closures were approved so late last term that parents had no chance to fight them. Now I have heard of several counties holding these unusual summer meetings, which will enable them to get their closure notices published and their proposals approved by the Secretary of State in time to close the schools next year, instead of the year after."

The tragedy of the closure of village schools is that, not only does it greatly harm the education of the children concerned, but that without the school as a community focus the village itself starts to wither and die. Couples with school-age children tend to leave, and the population becomes increasingly elderly. Thus more and more countryfolk eventually get sucked into the soulless concrete-and-glass agglomerations that are contemporary cities.

The Tories argue that these education cuts are necessary. But the folly of the cuts is exposed when one realises that both the 1981 census and recent birthrate figures indicate that the rural school-age population will start to rise in the near future.

When the time comes for the National Front to assume the responsibilities for the government of Britain, rural education is likely to have become a wasteland. The restoration of the village school, and thus the revitalisation of the village community, will be one of our most important tasks.

PRESERVE AND PROSPER

THE CONSERVATION of historic buildings and areas can play a vital part in regenerating the local economy. That was the conclusion reached by the authors of a report called Preserve and Prosper – published by the Save Britain's Heritage environmental group.

And the benefits of conservation would not be confined solely to the prosperous South-east of England. Indeed, East Anglia, once one of the most traditional and best conserved parts of the country, has the greatest growth in population in England.

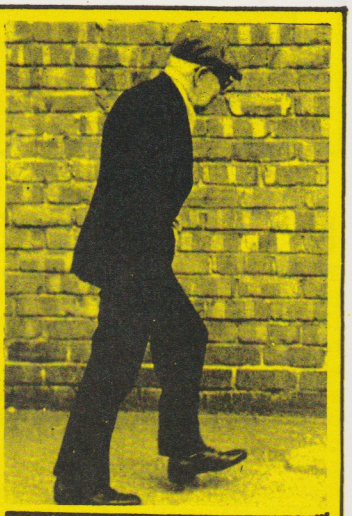
A fact that emerges strongly from the report is the potential economic benefit of energetically pursued conservation policies to local planning authorities:

"Those local authorities faced with loss of employment, depopulation and a general spiral of decay and dereliction should look to conservation as well as new development if they are to stimulate economic regeneration."

So, the NF's conservation and 'back to the land' policies work and make practical sense – and are not just 'ruralistic' fantasy. For, as Preserve and Prosper noted:

". . . remote towns and villages in areas suffering from depopulation and decline of their staple industries or trade, were all among those reporting economic benefits from conservation policies."

HEALTH CUTS HIT THE OLD FOLK



OLD people will bear the brunt of the Government's health service cuts despite pledges that provision for the old and infirm would remain a top priority. Medical and nursing staff fear that reduction in funding and staffing levels demanded by the Tories will rebound most seriously on the aged.

John Healey, director of nursing services in Birmingham, said that junior health minister, Kenneth Clarke, was "not being totally honest with the public" when he said that provision for old people was a top priority.

Specific examples of old people bearing the brunt of the health cuts include the indefinite postponement of plans for fifty new hospital beds for elderly people at the Sanderson and Walkergate Hospital on Tyneside. In Sheffield, plans at the Northern General Hospital to move 300 geriatric patients out of a 19th century workhouse into new purpose-built accommodation are now in doubt, as are similar projects in other major cities, including a planned rehabilitation day clinic at Edinburgh's Royal Victoria Hospital.

This, then, is the real result of Tory cuts in the health service and any claims by Kenneth Clarke or any other Tory that health care for old folk is a "top priority" can be seen to be nothing more than a cynical lie. The top priority, as far as the Tories are concerned, is not Britian's old folk any more than it is the school leavers who have been thrown onto the economic scrap-heap as a result of Conservative policy. The top priority for the Tories is to make the rich even richer at the expense of the less well off. Tory tax cuts for the more prosperous sections of the population make this government a modern day Robin Hood in reverse – they steal from the poor in order to give to the rich!

TORIES KILL OFF THE NHS

- THE BIG health service union COHSE says there were 17,673 unemployed nurses and midwives in September 1982 – an increase of 25% on the previous year. And vacancies were down from 2,957 to 2,526.
- PRESCRIPTION charges have risen by 700% since May 1979 – from 20p to £1.40 per item. This was despite a Tory election promise not to increase them.
- IN 1979 there were 493 unemployed doctors. This year over 2,000 are looking for a job.
- SOME 8,000 NHS beds have been lost in the past four years following the closure of 182 hospitals and the partial closure of 345 others.
- AT THE last count there were 625,000 people in Britain waiting for hospital treatment.
- THERE are 791 beds unused in six new hospitals which have not opened because of lack of funds to staff and maintain them.
- THE NHS hires out 2,700 beds to private patients queue-jumping by paying an average of £110 a day.
- BRITAIN spends under 6% of the nation's wealth on health. That is less than most European countries and the United States.

B. Halliday	15 years	M. Rooney	5 years recorded
S. Austin	15 years	Edward McKinney	2 years suspended
N. Large	15 years	Pauline McKinney	2 years suspended

Details of the sentences meted out to defendants at the two recent 'super-grass' trials in Northern Ireland. British patriots received heavy jail sentences while Republican murderers received the wrong sort of suspended sentence!

THE recent release of Ann and Eileen Gillespie, the women imprisoned for their part in an IRA bombing campaign in Manchester, illustrated the way in which Republicans are let off lightly by the British government.

The two sisters were freed after serving only eight years of their fourteen year sentence. This sickening miscarriage of justice contrasts greatly to the treatment of Loyalist prisoners such as UVF leader Gusty Spence who has now been locked up for sixteen years. Spence, unlike the Gillespie sisters, is not likely to be released for some considerable time yet.

Another striking discrepancy in the treatment of Loyalists compared to Republicans came in the wake of the recent 'super-grass' trials in Belfast.

In the first trial a super-grass by the name of Joe Bennett implicated some former colleagues in crimes related to membership of an illegal para-military organisation and possession of firearms. The defendants implicated by Bennett received heavy jail sentences of between five years and fifteen years.

In the second trial another super-grass by the name of Christopher Black implicated his former colleagues in the same two crimes: the possession of firearms and membership of an illegal para-military organisation. This time, however, the sentences were very much lighter, ranging from a conditional discharge to nine months suspended.

So what made the crimes of those people convicted in the first trial so much more serious than those convicted in the second?

The answer is very simple. The defendants in the first trial, who all received sentences of between five and fifteen years, were all members of the Loyalist Ulster Volunteer Force. Meanwhile, the defendants in the second trial, who all received suspended sentences, were members of the Provisional IRA.

It is clear from these discrepancies that the British Government considers it a greater crime to be a member of the Ulster Volunteer Force than it is to be a member of the Provisional IRA.

It is apparent also that the Government considers an organisation which only carries out attacks against Republican murderers a greater threat than an organisation which specialises in murdering British soldiers and innocent women and children. The traitors at Westminster are not only the sworn enemies of the Loyalists in Ulster, they are the evil and corrupt appeasers of this country's enemies!

IN ULSTER, Republican prisoners outnumber Loyalists by, in some cases, four to one.

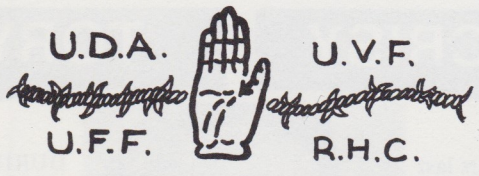
They use their numerical superiority to deny Loyalist prisoners basic canteen, washroom and recreational facilities. This in turn creates tension in Ulster's jails. Many Loyalists who have rejected Republican rule in prison have been viciously assaulted. It is only a matter of time until someone loses their life.

By the beginning of October 1982, the majority of Loyalist PoW's in Long Kesh, except when at work, were locked up in their cells 24 hours per day. Hand-picked militant Republican 'orderlies' were always on hand to enforce the lock-ups.

Prison staff were well aware of what was happening – but were unable to afford any protection to any Loyalist who wished to use prison facilities.

Pushed to the limit by IRA/INLA domination in Long Kesh – and receiving neither help nor protection from the prison authorities – Loyalist prisoners, as a last resort, decided to wreck their cells in the hope that such action would draw public attention to their plight. The protest had its desired effect – those Loyalists who had wrecked their cells were moved to H Blocks which housed only Loyalist prisoners. A measure of security had been achieved.

However, those Loyalist prisoners who did not take part in the protest were moved to the Republican-dominated HI.



Two weeks after the protests, all Loyalist PoW's in Long Kesh were asked whether they would "conform to prison rules by being in such accommodation, and working, as the Governor directs"?

Loyalist PoW's answered yes to this question – so long as the prison authorities could provide them adequate security.

However, the Governor of Long Kesh refused to accept this simple Loyalist request. All who had made this request were then immediately deemed to be 'non-conforming' prisoners.

Having made this classification, the Governor then imposed 10 days' loss of remission every month, 14 days' loss of association every month, and the loss of all other privileges.

Undaunted by this, Loyalist PoW's are still campaigning to be provided with adequate protection from Republicans in Long Kesh.

A National Front government would immediately free all Loyalist political prisoners. But until that day, all NF members should support the Loyalist PoW's. They are serving time because of their courage in fighting Britain's enemies and should not now be under threat from Republican murderers. Support segregation for Loyalist prisoners!

The making of a Prophet

FATHER Michael Woodard is an archetypal do-gooder. He is one of those thoroughly 'nice' people who nurture the suicidal belief that charity begins everywhere other than at home.

Yet is Father Woodard as "good" as he would have us believe? And is his holier-than-thou attitude justified?

A look into some of his dealings may throw some light on the subject.

Woodard is the self-appointed head of a charitable religious order called the World Order for Cultural Exchange. The aim of his 'World Order' is to establish a system of "twinning" children in the Third World with children in the West and to unite all faiths and cultures as a method of obtaining 'world peace'.

How the coming together of Buddhist monks and Anglican bishops is going to stop two nutcases like Reagan and Andropov from dropping the Bomb is not clearly explained. Nevertheless his intentions are 'good' and minor details such as this appear not to have worried religious leaders throughout the world who have given their support to Woodard's charity.

However, there are one or two other details which Woodard has chosen not to divulge to the patrons of his charity.

NEVER ORDAINED

First of all, "Father" Michael Woodard is not a "Father" at all. When dressed in the green habit of his religious order he looks every bit the clergyman he purports to be, yet he is a married man who has never been ordained.

In fact, Woodard only decided to try his hand at becoming a priest after several of his business ventures collapsed. Most of his life Woodard has been an unsuccessful businessman, twice being bankrupted.

Among the many unfortunate victims of "Father" Woodard's business ventures are the people of Wincanton in Somerset. They remember Woodard as the man who, in the early Seventies, proposed a £1 million redevelopment which would give the centre of the small market town a "Swiss village atmosphere".

When the scheme collapsed, it left dereliction in the centre of Wincanton and led Woodard to the bankruptcy court for the second time.

Now, however, Woodard has learned his lesson and is earning quite a reasonable living out of the World Order, which in real terms is nothing more than this do-gooder's latest business venture.

Life membership of the World Order costs £1,000 and the accounts reveal that £9,200 was unaccounted for last year. The accounts also show that Woodard claims to have spent over £180,000 on behalf of the charity before it was set up. This is now being repaid to him and £15,590 was handed over last year.

Looking at "Father" Michael Woodard's income it is no surprise that he has been able to afford an attractive farmhouse in rural Hampshire. Woodard is one do-gooder who believes in doing good for one person alone – and that's himself!

"Father" Michael Woodard

TORY POLICIES THREATEN YOUR PINT

A REPORT published by the National Economic Development Office has revealed the extent to which Tory policies are menacing your pint. Mass unemployment has reduced the amount the average drinker has available to spend on beer and the Tories have slammed tax rise after tax rise on the price of beer.

Since the Tory assumption of power in 1979 the amount of duty and VAT on beer shot up by a staggering 117%: twice the rate of inflation. Further tax increases were slapped on last April. Today, of what you pay for the average pint, 15.2p goes in duty and 7.8p in VAT. Over the same period the average price of a pint has gone up 71%. There have been two beer price rises this year alone, and another one has just been announced by a number of breweries.

LACK OF TRADE

All this has hit the beer trade hard. There is now a fall in sales of 3.9% a year. Pubs, especially in rural villages, are being forced to close for lack of trade.

The report recommended that no more tax increases be imposed on British beer, already amongst the most heavily taxed in the world. But instead the situation is likely to get worse, thanks to the Common Market.

For in July the EEC's "European Court" ordered the British Government to reduce the tax ratio between their wine and our beer to help the Continentals sell more wine here at the expense of our own ale. The result is likely to be an extra 7p on the price of the average pint.

Traditional British beer is part of our nation's heritage. The British pint in the British pub should be cherished and preserved, instead of being sacrificed on the altar of Tory greed.

MARXIST HYPOCRISY

ARTHUR Scargill (right) showed his true colours last month when he launched a vicious attack on Solidarity, the Polish free trade union.

Scargill made the attack in Newsline, the Workers' Revolutionary Party paper. He claimed that Solidarity is an "anti-socialist" organisation aiming to overthrow the socialist government in Poland.

The fact that the leader of Britain's miners' union should support a State Capitalist regime in preference to a genuinely free trade union, indicates the hypocrisy of Marxist trade union leaders.

TORY CORRUPTION

DURING the Falklands War the Thatcher Government awarded a large number of defence contracts to the electronics group Racal.

Prior to the war Racal used to give the Tories donations of £10,000 a year. Since then the rate has increased to a massive £75,000 a year.

Of course we're sure the Tories didn't know this would happen when they awarded the contracts – no one could ever accuse our beloved Tory Party of being corrupt, now could they?

CEYLON—Race War warns Britain

THE recent racial violence in Ceylon (Sri Lanka) in which hundreds died, tens of thousands were made homeless and millions of pounds of damage was caused, is a terrible foretaste of the future of multiracialism in Britain. For the situation in Ceylon which caused this eruption is strikingly similar to our own.

Just like Coloured Immigrants in Britain, the Tamil Immigrants in Ceylon – who are as distinct racially and culturally from the native Singhalese people as Turks are from Britons – were imported by international Capitalists as cheap labour: the Tamils were shipped in from India in the 19th Century to pick tea.

And just like the Jews in Britain, the Tamils in Ceylon, through usury and conspiracy, rapidly rose to take over the country's economy, media and other positions of power. By the mid-1950's, although comprising only 18% of the island's population, Tamil Immigrants held over 75% of all the top jobs in business, the media, and the Civil Service. Like today's Britons, the Singhalese had become second-class citizens in their own country.

So, as White Britons one day will, the native Singhalese finally rose in revolt against multiracialism and the control of their land by ethnic aliens. Savage race riots in 1957, 1958, 1961 and 1965 forced the liberal-Tory Senanyake Government to act. In 1966 the Ceylon Government concluded an agreement with India to begin the repatriation of the Tamils to the country they came from. Contrary to liberal claims, such a repatriation treaty was easily agreed, and it is clear that the Indian Government would just as gladly agree to have the Asians in Britain back.

But, although it had to bow to its citizens' anger and make some gesture toward repatriating foreign Immigrants, the Ceylonese Government, trained by British Establishment Tories, refused to make this repatriation compulsory – though India was willing to accept all Tamils in Ceylon back. So, just as would happen with the "voluntary repatriation" schemes proposed by "Right-Wing" Tories over here, the scheme failed. For in the absence of compulsion only about a quarter of the Immigrants went home.

Then, as the Republicans in Ulster have and the Blacks on the mainland will, the remaining Tamils turned to terrorist violence. IRA-style murder gangs killed and bombed, demanding that the Tamil Immigrants be given a quarter of the host country as a state, independent or united with India.

Finally, after Tamil terrorists butchered 13 Singhalese in July, the natives' patience snapped. The Immigrants have been chased and burned out of most of the country, and now huddle in northern refugee camps. As Britons one day will, the Singhalese have acted to rid their land of a multiracial society.

For that is how multiracialism must end, in blood and fire if not by compulsory repatriation. In Britain, every bit as much as in Ceylon.

CHAD—Another Race War

ESTABLISHMENT media commentators who blame the war in the African state of Chad on "the lunatic adventurist schemes of Libya's Colonel Gaddafi" have ignored the real root of the conflict – Race.

For the country, whose borders were drawn virtually at random across the Sahara Desert by French bureaucrats, is a multiracial state. In the North live Hamitic Tourou and Tuareg people, of predominantly Caucasoid race and Muslim religion. The more fertile South is inhabited by Negroes of the Bantu Sara and Borobo tribes.

The consequence of this state of affairs, in which the country is not only multi-tribal, like most African states, but multi-racial, has been unremitting chaos. Since independence in 1960, the country has been torn by continuous civil war between the Northern Arabs and the Southern Blacks. The capital, N'jamena (formerly Fort Lamy), has the dubious distinction of being generally regarded as the most thoroughly looted city in Africa. And dictators have risen and fallen like yo-yos with monotonous regularity, as each race briefly seizes and then loses the upper hand.

Like all multiracial societies are sooner or later, Chad is a bloodstained failure. Yet again it is proved that people of differing races cannot live peacefully together. By occupying the Hamitic North and in effect partitioning the country on racial lines, Col. Gaddafi has offered the only slim hope of bringing peace to this race-war-ravaged land. In Chad, as in Ceylon, and as in Britain, multiracial societies don't work, and the total separation of the races, by partition if both races are native, by repatriation if one of them isn't, is yet again demonstrated to be the only way to create a peaceful, prosperous and united society.

COLONEL GADAFFI: Not responsible for the war in Chad.

GUNS FOR THE GOYIM

THE blood-monied government of Israel, not content with re-supplying Argentina with aircraft and the Gabriel anti-shipping missile (even more deadly than the Exocet), is now busy equipping another extreme right-wing government with whom Britain may soon find itself fighting – Guatemala.

Guatemala lays claim to the British dependency of Belize (the sooner we give up this relic of reactionary imperialism the better), which is defended by a small detachment of British troops. While there is no doubt that they could repel any Guatemalan invasion, the large amount of Israeli-supplied weapons are bound to cause casualties to our troops – just as they did in the Falklands.

Yet, at the same time, in a complete about turn Israel is to supply highly advanced technology to Russia via Finland. In true Capitalist style, Russia has bought 55% of the Finnish firm, Elorg-Data, and it is to use this firm as a back door entrance for Israeli technology. The technology thus gained will be highly appreciated by the Russian war machine.

FUTURA
THE DESTRUCTION OF DRESDEN
February 13th, 1945. Dresden was an undefended city packed with refugees fleeing from the advancing Russians. More people were to die there than at Hiroshima or at Nagasaki. In one of the most devastating raids of the War, almost 2000 Allied bombers dropped 3000 tons of bombs including 650,000 incendiaries on the centre of Dresden. The result was a raging fire storm that virtually erased the city and killed 135,000 people.

THIS book, The Destruction of Dresden, is being given out completely free to all Nationalists who take out a subscription to Nationalism Today. Written by internationally-renowned historian, David Irving, it details the horrific bombing of the German town by the Allied forces during the Second World War.

YESTERDAY AND TOMORROW

Reviewed by TOM ACTON

ANY NEW political movement needs to fulfill certain conditions to succeed. Appropriate leadership and organisation are required, together with the right external social and economic conditions, but it is also necessary to win "the war of ideas".

The last point is especially important to the contemporary British Nationalist movement. It is of necessity a revolutionary movement —whether it likes it or not — because the ruling multiracialist liberal-capitalist Establishment denies it the normal 'legitimate' route to power open to all other creeds and parties. In consequence British Nationalism needs to attract dedicated and politically committed people to its ranks if it is to win the inevitably long and arduous struggle for victory. In order to do this it is necessary for nationalists to develop their ideas and policies much more deeply and profoundly than has been the case in the past.

It is against this background that Yesterday and Tomorrow – roots of the national-revolution has to be considered.

Published by the Rising Press, producers of the National-Revolutionary magazine Rising, Yesterday and Tomorrow is an anthology of extracts from the political writings of a remarkably diverse range of people considered to have contributed to the development of modern nationalist thought, with the majority of the entries having been written in the first half of this century.

ALIEN DOGMAS

The anonymous editor explains why the book was published in the introduction:—

"The gathering crisis of Capitalism and its Communist offspring has weakened the hold of these two alien dogmas on our peoples. Their materialism has nothing left to offer, neither ideals nor even economic security.

"So it is that youth, and the young at heart, in the White nations are now looking back to our own spiritual and ideological heritage, seeking in the ideas of our forefathers a future for our children. The German National-Socialists; the Fascists; the British Distributists and early patriotic Socialists; all these and many others have contributed to the great heritage of National Revolutionary thought.

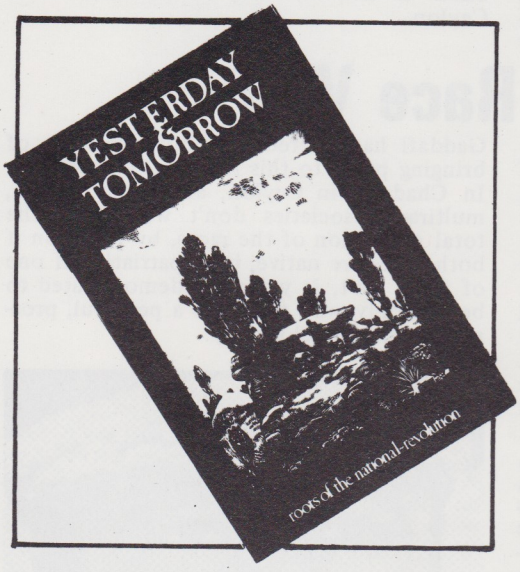
"It is hoped that this book will put back into circulation political ideas and spiritual ideals that have lain dormant for too long."

It is to the great credit of the Rising Press that they have produced a work which, because of the controversial and provocative nature of much of the contents, will certainly arouse interest in the authors quoted, and prompt further reading of their works. The effect is slightly spoiled however by the fact that no bibliography is given detailing the published works of the writers concerned; indeed for many extracts the source publication is not even quoted. Presumably one of the aims of the book is to broaden interest among nationalists in writers such as G. K. Chesterton and William Morris, thus the omission is unfortunate to say the least.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL ISSUES

The bulk of the book is concerned with social and economic issues, and there is a recurring emphasis on the need for European man to rediscover his affinity with the land, by returning to a rural environment.

Although some of the entries discuss the influence of the Jews in Europe, notably the extract from For My Legionaries by Corneliu Codreanu, relatively little emphasis is placed on the racial issue. The editor admits that this is a vital issue but explains the omission on the grounds that "the solution is clear-cut and unarguable: there is no place for racial aliens in the Social Nationalist state." I consider though that the omission is a mistake. Nationalist solutions to the race problem are certainly clear-cut and easily understood — but the reasons behind them are complex and at present understood by few, with the vast majority of the public swallowing the Establishment line that we simply 'hate Blacks'.



Social and economic policies cannot be developed in isolation from racial policies, and one wishes that the editor could have found space for even one article on race, and its place in Nationalism.

Space precludes a detailed review of each individual article in the book, but two articles in particular merit close attention by readers of Yesterday and Tomorrow. First, A Workers Policy through Syndicalism by former BUF member Raven Thompson which details the industrial policy of Oswald Mosley's Union Movement in the 1950 s, and which shows many similarities to present day National Front policies. Secondly The Structure of German Socialism by Otto Strasser, which is by far the largest extract in the book, and concisely sets out the basic elements of Strasserite National Socialism.

STIMULATE THOUGHT

Each reader will doubtless form his or her own conclusions, but personally I feel that the real value of this book is that it will stimulate thought and debate, on a variety of important social and economic topics, within the nationalist movement. Additionally it is usefully educational on various aspects of nationalist history.

Although the vast majority of British Nationalists are likely to find themselves in agreement with the bulk of the sentiments expressed in Yesterday and Tomorrow, few are likely to give the same unqualified commendation of the authors involved as the editor does, who claims that "the fact that their answers are still valid is proof that they were right."

It is a possible criticism of Yesterday and Tomorrow that it tends to present the various extracts uncritically, as if each represented the ideologically perfect final word on each subject. I suspect that most readers will find points to disagree with as they read through Yesterday and Tomorrow – and it is surely desirable that they should. To give one small but obvious example:– included in the book are the original "25 Points" of NSDAP policy. I would imagine that few radical nationalists nowadays would support the essentially state-capitalistic demand of point 13 for the nationalisation of all incorporated companies (as opposed to transforming them into co-operatives).

However, in spite of such criticisms, Yesterday and Tomorrow has brought back into print a lot of very valuable Nationalist works which have been unavailable for many years. It is a must for the bookshelf of every Nationalist.

THE TIDE HAS TURNED

Nick Griffin

"NATIONAL REVOLUTION". Since this is the demand of the National Front, it is important that we understand what it means and how revolutions happen. The scope of the war for our Nation is so vast that it can be difficult to see its different battles in their true perspective; but it is vital that we do so. For if we do not have in mind a blue-print for our revolution, we will have no yard-stick by which to measure the value of our day-to-day activities. We must therefore pay attention to the mechanics of revolution. Fortunately history provides a number of examples of successful ones. Without admiring their aims, we can learn from their methods.

It is important to stress that "revolution" does not necessarily involve violence. Certainly some do – notably in France and Russia. Others, such as the rise of Mussolini and the creation of the Irish Free State, were the result of differing mixtures of violence and political pressure. Some, ranging from the victory of Nazism to the growth of the British Labour movement, came about democratically.

However the change occurs, there are several features common to all successful revolutions. In every case, things are prepared years in advance. The old Establishment had become decadent. A significant proportion of the next generation of the ruling élite had adopted beliefs and cultural values sympathetic to one degree or another with the forces of change.

The spirit of the French Revolution had won the hearts and minds of lawyers and lesser nobles at least a generation before a temporary bread shortage aroused the Paris mob. The Nationalist Revolutions of 19th Century Europe sprang from fifty years of activity from seemingly irrelevant cultural and sporting clubs.

HARD-CORE

The next vital ingredient is the existence of a hard-core political élite with the will and ability to replace the old order. It may be organised secretly, as with the French masonic lodges; as a political party, for example the NSDAP; or as a terrorist force, as with the IRA. The lines between the different methods are often blurred, but the dedicated and disciplined organisation is essential.

The third requirement is a popular lack of faith in the old System. Without such mass support, whether electoral or physical, the challenging group is unable to overthrow its dead weight.

Without the support of at least a section of the culturally and morally dominant part of the population for the revolution, on the other hand, the Establishment will be able to justify repressing "criminal elements led by trouble-makers". Even if it does fall, the change in this case is not a revolution, but merely a switch of government, for the old ideology lives on to rise again.

Alternatively, popular resentment and cultural and ideological alienation will only produce isolated protests in the absence of an organised force with a sense of direction.

So if any of the three ingredients is missing, a revolution is impossible. If all three are combined, it is inevitable. What does this mean for the National Front? Can we have a British Revolution?

The First Russian Revolution 1905-07. There are lessons we can learn from every successful political uprising.

The possibility of mass rejection of the Establishment has long been clear. The mixture of racial hostility and economic collapse is explosive. When the inevitable happens, the politicians, community relations police and media hacks will be discredited.

What about the hard-core revolutionary group? There is still much to be done, but the ideological development of the NF initiated by Martin Webster and Joe Pearce, has created a large degree of real unity. On that sound foundation we can build the organisation and acquire the assets that will make us a contender for power.

So far, so good. But where are the leaders of science, ideas and culture who must be won to our side? We talk of a National Revolution, but there is no national feeling among these people – no resistance to Immigration; no rejection of American "culture"; no opposition to materialism and the loss of independence that spring from the urbanisation of our whole world. Or is there? While it might have been true back in the 1960s, I believe that things are now changing.

First of all, look at the proliferation of worthwhile independent publications and groups doing useful work roughly on our wavelength. Cultural magazines such as Heritage and Destiny; papers like Rising, with translations from foreign ideologists and an interesting if ambitious scheme for a kind of distributist community. National Consciousness has done much to promote racial economic ideas. Candour has set up the A. K. Chesterton Academy, to which I was privileged to be invited to give a lecture in a personal capacity. The combination of hard work on the land, political education and evening socialising which the Academy has developed is, incidentally, a successful model for weekend seminars which the NF should adopt as soon as possible.

Other magazines are more distant from the NF in outlook, but the intellectual quality of Scorpion and the detailed research of Lords of the Realm into International Finance make them worth a mention, even though they are not uncritical of the Party.

Things are changing in popular culture too. The success of Skrewdriver is the most obvious example, but there is a broader undercurrent of Nationalist ideas, opposition to Coca-cola culture and negroid influences, which extend even to bands who claim to oppose us.

This development, where even people who are hostile to us accept many Nationalist ideas, can also be seen in the Green movement, whose anti-materialism and concern for conservation and the quality of life lead ultimately to our ideological position. If individual species of whale are worth preserving, so too are the different human races. If primitive tribes have a right to preserve their culture, so too do the nations of Europe. This trend of thought is more advanced among the German Greens than in Britain, but it is bound to gain ground here.

DEMOLISHED

Perhaps the most important work preparing the ground for the victory of our ideas is that of the socio-biologists. Their research has demolished the Equality myth and destroyed the intellectual credibility of Marxism.

Our opponents have lost their grip. They are now on the defensive. Their paid hacks will still hurl abuse at us, but from now on the people who count – scientists, genuine intellectuals and the cultural élite of the nation – will move towards our ideas.

We do not need to turn all of those people into NF members, nor to take part in their activities. The task that demands our time and loyalties is the building of a tight-knit organisation which can match their vague sympathy with intelligent action.

It has been said that a revolutionary is like a fish – he needs a pool of popular support in which to swim. For thirty years or more, Nationalist ideas have been out of the mainstream and Nationalists have been stranded in a little rock pool. Now the tide has turned. There is a broad sea of sympathy slowly building up out there – our time to swim in it is coming!

AN ULSTER LOYALIST SPEAKS OUT

An exclusive interview with George Seawright

GEORGE Seawright is a leading member of the Democratic Unionist Party. He is a member of both the Ulster Assembly and the Belfast City Council. He was also the defeated DUP candidate in the North Belfast constituency in the last General Election.

Mr. Seawright is a highly respected Loyalist politician and is very active in the campaign for the segregation of Loyalist prisoners. Nationalism Today is pleased to be able to publish this exclusive interview with him.

George Seawright

• How exactly do you see your role as a member of the new Ulster Assembly and how are you using your position in the Assembly to further the Loyalist cause?

Since both the Socialist and Conservative Governments have used Direct Rule to stifle and override the wishes of the Ulster Loyalists, any constitutional vehicle such as the Assembly which enables us to bridle such Direct Rule is very important. The main power of the Assembly at present is that of scrutinising Government decisions in the various Committees. The Republican element have shown their fear of the Assembly by attempting to wreck it by boycott.

Since I represent a constituency both in the Assembly and on the Belfast City Council which has borne the brunt of Republican terrorism, I feel that the Assembly provides a platform to speak up for my people who have suffered so much over the last 13 years.

• Do you consider yourself to be a hard-liner and would you put yourself down as being on the militant end or the 'moderate' end of the Loyalist political spectrum?

The aim of both the IRA and the INLA terrorists is the genocide of the majority Protestant community. They are determined to exterminate or drive out the Loyalist population. The Ulster 'troubles' are a war for the survival of the Loyalist people and there is no room for moderates in such a struggle. I suppose I could be called 'hard-line' in that I believe in the total eradication of the armed forces of Republicanism, and am opposed to any political compromise with the enemies of the state. The fate of the Rhodesian whites, teaches us where political compromise and moderation lead to.

• What is your attitude to the Loyalist Prisoners in Long Kesh and elsewhere? Do you believe that they should be treated in the same way as Republican Prisoners or do you believe they should be treated completely differently? Are you in favour of segregation of Loyalist Prisoners from Republicans?

Before the 'troubles' Ulster had the lowest percentage prison population of any part of the UK. The majority community have always been hard working and law-abiding. It was only when the IRA terrorists seemed to be getting away with their crimes that Loyalist people in despair retaliated and as a result there are Loyalist prisoners today. I believe that the vast majority of Loyalist prisoners are patriots who although they may have acted illegally, believed they were protecting their homes, families and country in the face of a breakdown of law and order and the abject failure of the government to deal with terrorism.

I fully endorse the campaign for the segregation of Loyalist Prisoners, as being a minority in the prisons they are, in my opinion, at daily risk of injury or even death at the hands of Republican prisoners who heavily outnumber them.

• Where do you stand on other national issues such as the Common Market, unemployment and immigration?

Regarding national issues, my policy could be summed up in the words "Britain First". I believe that our membership of the Common Market has been a disaster for Britain both economically and politically. It has weakened our national sovereignty and made the laws and Parliament of the UK subservient to the dictates of Brussels. I view the EEC as part of a deliberate design by "International Finance" to bring about an eventual "world government" under their control in which nation states would cease to exist.

On the immigration issue, I believe that a Britain with 3 million unemployed has no room for 3 million or more immigrants not of our indigenous ethnic stock. I believe that native-born Britons should have priority in jobs and houses. I believe that immigrants should be encouraged by the government to return to their country of origin and no further waves of aliens permitted to enter. Present government policy could well produce a racial bloodbath in the "inner cities" of Britain.

I deplore the millions spent on aid to countries in Asia and Africa whilst cuts are made in Britain which are harmful to our Education and Health Services.

• Recently six people were arrested when the National Front attacked an Irish Republican meeting in Camden, North London. How do you look upon activities such as this, and how do you view organisations such as the National Front?

It is understandable that patriots on the mainland should be provoked by public displays of IRA activity when one considers such atrocities against our soldiers as Warrenpoint, Ballykelly and the bombs in London and Birmingham.

As to the NF I welcome every sign of a resurgence of patriotism throughout the UK. Every attempt is being made by the "one-worlders" to make us ashamed of our National Identity, this trend must be reversed. I especially welcome the vigorous support given by the NF to the Ulster Loyalist cause down the years. I only wish more people on the mainland would take the trouble to find out the facts and speak up as you have done.

• What do you think of the majority of MPs in Parliament and, in particular, their attitudes towards Republicanism?

Unfortunately the vast majority of MPs lacking the basic philosophy of British Patriotism have proved their weakness on most vital issues, not the least being Ulster. With a small number of exceptions MPs of all parties fail to see that we are engaged in a war against dedicated terrorists who will stop at nothing. They seem to think Republicanism can be bought off by political concessions and solutions at the expense of the majority. Every concession serves to encourage the IRA and INLA to press on to their ultimate goal. Republicanism can never be placated, it must be destroyed.

• Ideally, what action would you wish to see from the Westminster Parliament as regards the 'troubles' in Northern Ireland?

Ideally, the Westminster Parliament must recognise the state of war that exists in Ulster and it must be won. There must be a commitment to military victory over the armed forces of Republicanism before progress can be made. They should restore a system of Devolved Government to Ulster based on the principle of majority rule (which they insisted on in Rhodesia) and they should give a commitment that Ulster is British forever.

• Finally, how do you see future developments unfolding and what do you see as being necessary for the long-term prosperity and freedom of Britain in general and Ulster in particular?

The destiny of Ulster is tied inseparably to the rest of the UK. Britain must become a sovereign power assuming full responsibility for the safety and well being of its citizens, clearly recognising that anything which threatens this ideal is to be identified for the enemy it is. There is nothing more obnoxious to me than a false patriotism which claims to love the country but has no concern for the people. True patriotism manifests itself by a genuine concern not only for the nation as a unit but for the total welfare of the citizens who make up the nation. As for Ulster, political and economic progress will only come when the last armed Republican has been dealt with, as Loyalism and Republicanism can never peacefully co-exist.

SOME THOUGHTS FOR REMEMBRANCE DAY

In memory of all those people who died for Britain, believing that they were fighting for Freedom. Their sacrifice has been betrayed, but their spirit lives on in those who carry on the fight for Race and Nation.

EPITAPH FOR AN UNKNOWN SOLDIER

To save your world you asked this man to die:
Would this man, could he see you now, ask why?

ELEGY IN A COUNTRY CHURCHYARD
By G. K. CHESTERTON

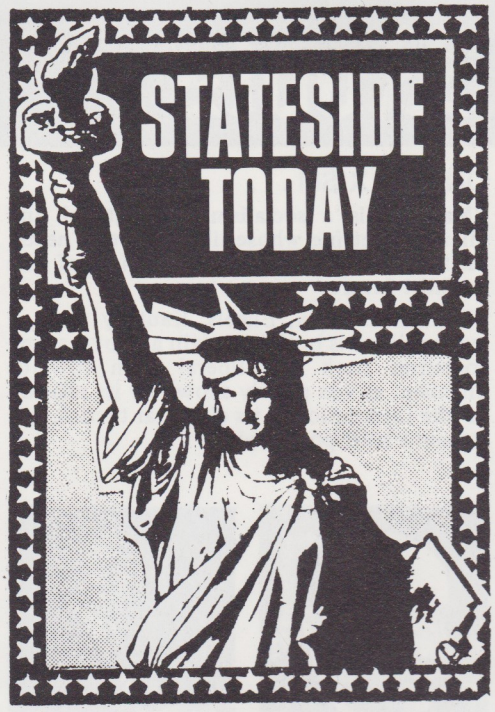
The men that worked for England
They have their graves at home
And bees and birds of England
About the cross can roam.

But they that fought for England
Following a falling star,
Alas, alas for England
They have their graves afar.

And they that rule in England,
In stately conclave met,
Alas, alas for England
They have no graves as yet.

FOR A WAR MEMORIAL
By G. K. CHESTERTON

Still to the last of crumbling time
Upon this stone be read
How many men of England died
To prove they were not dead.



POSTMAN'S KNOCKOUT

THE UNITED STATES has been known for centuries as "the land of the free and the home of the brave," though patriots throughout the Western world have known for many a long year that this is one of History's sickest jokes: "land of the slave and home of the Jew" would be more appropriate.

Nonetheless, despite the ever-tightening hold of capitalist leeches and Zionist-Jewish manipulators upon the machinery of government, the American people have managed to retain vestages of their freedom. We know that Reagan is a stooge of Jewish financial interests; we know that Big Business reigns supreme; we know that the major TV stations and principle newspapers are in the hands of corrupt propagandists.

In the face of this massive onslaught against the independence of the Republic, a whole gamut of bulletins and magazines has grown up which seeks to combat, each in its own way, the strategies and lies of the Establishment. Now, however, the capitalists and Jews clearly think the time is opportune to remove this source of irritation. They have introduced a bill, HR1342, into Congress which, if it is enacted, will give draconian powers to the United States Postal Service (USPS). Although defeated during the last session of Congress, the bill has reappeared quickly and is currently awaiting legislative action. The bill will give the USPS the power to order a business, profession or publication to "cease or desist" their business or publication. Naturally, the bill will be full of soothing talk about being used "only in exceptional circumstances" and against bona fide 'subversives', but the reality will be very different. It will mean the end of patriotic and Nationalist publishing in the USA; it will mean a monopoly of the media for the first time in history.

American patriots need to stand firm against this gross violation of their liberties, but we must not look on disinterestedly for, as we all know, whatever afflicts the USA comes in time to afflict the United Kingdom. We have been warned.

CALIFORNIA SCHEMING

MOST NATIONALISTS have heard of the Bilderberg Group, that shadowy organisation of top international businessmen, politicians and plutocrats, who constantly agitate from behind the scenes for a "One-World" global dictatorship. Few however have heard of the Bohemian Club, an equally secretive body with a similar membership and similar goals.

Each year the club holds a weekend Conference for its 2000 members, in the palatial surrounds of the "Bohemian Grove", the club's country retreat set in a 2700 acre redwood forest north of San Francisco. The members each pay $2000 initiation fee to join, plus another $2000 each year for continued membership.

Right now those who attend aren't just a part of the American Establishment – they are the Establishment! Last year 15 of the 25 biggest US manufacturing companies, 14 of the 25 largest insurance companies and 20 of the 25 largest banks had at least one Board Member there. The giant Citicorp sent a delegation of six directors, Chase Manhattan had five, including David Rockefeller.

This year Tom Clausen, head of the World Bank, attended to talk on the global economy; Henry Kissinger, Judaism's "Mr. Fixit", was there; also President Reagan and Stephen Bechtel Jr., chairman of the world's largest private company.

More than 90% of the Companies represented at the Conference donate to the Republican Party. Former Republican President Richard Nixon revealed the power of the Club when he admitted that the 1967 Conference was "the first step on my road to the Presidency." It was there that Ronald Reagan agreed to stand aside in favour of Nixon as Republican candidate.

Like the Bilderberg Group the Bohemian Club enjoys great financial, and thus political, power unchecked by elective responsibility. Like the Bilderberg Group it is a corrupt and evil organisation that threatens the independence and freedom of nations throughout the world: like the Bilderberg Group it must be exposed and destroyed!

"JEW-HATER"

ROBERT MITCHUM, the star of the historically-inaccurate ABC TV series The Winds of War, has been forced to issue an apology for statements critical of the Jews, which he made in an Esquire magazine interview earlier this year.

Soon after the article was printed, the terrorist Jewish Defence League branded Mitchum a "Jew hater", and demanded an "apology".

Mitchum claimed that his comments were made as a joke, but there is no doubt that he is aware of the evidence against the so-called "holocaust". For in the interview, Mitchum disputed the postwar propaganda claim that six million Jews were exterminated by National Socialist Germany and made a number of anti-Jewish statements.

Roots

A series of articles featuring quotes from some of the people who laid the foundations of Nationalist ideology.

THE Strasser brothers were very influential members of the National Socialist German Workers Party. Following an argument with Hitler, Otto Strasser resigned from the party while his brother Gregor was shot during the Night of the Long Knives in 1934. Their radical nationalist views live on, however, and are as relevant today as they were in the 1930's.

Otto Strasser

ON PRIVATE PROPERTY . . .

"Whoever recognises the truth of the saying 'Property makes free', whoever affirms the necessity for a sustaining stratum in any satisfactory social order – must look forward to the new order which will aim at the de-proletarianisation of the people, and at our liberation from the social and economic monopolies under whose harrow no sort of freedom is possible."

ON EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY . . .

"I have castigated and repudiated the liberal illusion of human equality, I nevertheless ardently champion the . . . doctrine that equality of opportunity is essential."

ON EDUCATION . . .

"Hitherto the main object of schooling has been to 'impart information', but henceforward it will be regarded as at least equally important to train character."

"The child will be growing up into the German cultural world, without having his mind unduly diverted towards alien cultures during the receptive years of childhood."

ON THE LEADERSHIP PRINCIPLE . . .

"The Idea is divine in origin, while men are only its vehicles, the body in which the Word is made flesh. The leader is made to serve the Idea, and it is to the Idea alone that we owe absolute allegiance. The leader is human, and it is human to err."

"The Idea is the decisive thing, and the individual conscience should be called upon to decide if there is any divergence between the Idea and the leader."

"The man who is unaware of his own limitations inevitably crashes, and drags everything else down with him."

ON HATE . . .

"Hate must be born of love. One must be capable of loving to know what is hateful, and so have the strength to destroy it."

ON THE NATIONAL REVOLUTION . . .

"The German people wants a German revolution, that is to say a national and social revolution."

ON CULTURE . . .

"Simplifying life would not mean a 'relapse into barbarism', for culture is not dependent upon luxury or upon the gratification of needlessly created wants."

ON MARXISM . . .

"Marxism is a socialism both liberal and alien, a doctrine whose liberal factors necessarily unfit it for the upbuilding of the socialist future."

"Thanks to Marx, Engels, Kautsky etc., all typical liberals both by origin and by nature, socialism took the liberal path towards alienism, as was plainly shown by its relation to the International, its class-war tactics, and its materialist philosophy."

LEFT Otto Strasser
RIGHT Gregor Strasser

ON MACHINERY . . .

"It is assuredly time . . . to end the tyranny of technique, to overthrow the dominion of the machine, and to make technique and the machine once more servants instead of masters – for their dominion has been an unmitigated curse."

ON URBAN LIFE . . .

"Those who understand that life in our huge tentacular towns is a danger to the race cannot fail to regard systematic de-urbanisation as urgently required for the sake of the people."

"Owing to the rapid growth of towns, of enormous towns, tentacular towns, people have been uprooted from the countryside and 'intellectualised' in a way that has weakened their healthy instincts; this has been accompanied by a growing inclination to overrate both machinery and sport, these in their turn tending to hasten the general despiritualisation of life."

ON LIBERAL DEMOCRACY . . .

"A genuine commonwealth of the people can . . . only be established by the destruction of the existing party system."

"From their very nature political parties have a vital interest in sundering the people into factions."

ON THE GUILD SYSTEM . . .

"The alternative to the bankrupt alien 'solutions' of Communism and Capitalism, the idea which we represent is the . . . political representation of parties, trades and professions based on our ancient Guild system."

ON MATERIALISM . . .

"The Philosophy of the liberal epoch has been and still is materialism. Nothing typifies Marxism more plainly than the fact that it is tainted with alien views of socialism, that its program is shaped by the materialist philosophy which it shares with liberalism."

"To the liberal capitalist and liberal Marxian ideal of modern mammoth factories producing vast quantities of goods, we should contrapose the . . . ideal of a full and free life, so that it will be the task of a responsible government to create the economic and social conditions essential to the realisation of such an ideal."

Gregor Strasser

ON SOCIALISM . . .

"We National Socialists are socialists, genuine, national, German socialists."

"From the Right we shall take Nationalism, which has so disastrously allied itself with capitalism, and from the Left we shall take Socialism, which has made such an unhappy union with internationalism. Thus we shall form the National Socialism which will be the motive force of a new Germany and a new Europe."

"We are 'socialists' and not mere 'social reformers' and we do not hesitate to say it, although the Marxians have so painfully distorted the meaning of the former term."

ON CAPITALISM . . .

"The capitalist economic system with its exploitation of those who are economically weak, with its robbery of the workers' labour power, with its unethical way of appraising human beings by the number of things and the amount of money they possess, instead of by their internal value and their achievements, must be replaced by a new and just economic system, in a word by German socialism."

ON MATERIALISM . . .

"The most deplorable legacy of the capitalist economic system is that it has taught us to judge all things by the standards of money, ownership, possession."

ON TAKING POWER . . .

"Everything which is detrimental to the existing order of things has our support . . . because we want catastrophe . . . in a word we are pursuing a policy of catastrophe because only catastrophe, that is, the collapse of the liberal system, will clear the way for those new tasks which we National Socialists name . . . everything which hastens the beginning of catastrophe in the present system, thus, for example, every strike, every governmental crisis, every erosion of state power, every weakening of the System . . . is good, very good for us . . . and it will always and constantly be our endeavour to strengthen such difficulties . . . in order to expedite the death of this system."

Are we eating ourselves to death?

A GROUP of doctors and scientists have produced a report which states that the average British diet is a major cause of many of the diseases we suffer and die from.

The report is known as the "James Report" after its chairman, Professor Philip James, an eminent nutritionist, and if its recommendations were implemented it would not only save lives but also money – by dramatically reducing the NHS bill. According to expert research, the bill could be cut by about £1 billion a year – some six per cent.

The James Report recommends that we eat 10 per cent less fat, sugar and salt, and 25 per cent more fibre in whole foods, over the next five years. Bigger changes are recommended long-term, including a halving of sugar intake.

Neither are the Report's findings solely the views of this one group of doctors and scientists. It stresses that its findings are a consensus of national and international medical and scientific opinion and calls for action from both the government and the food industry.

POTENTIAL SAVINGS

In response to the James Report, William Laing, ex-deputy director of the Office of Health Economics, did an analysis in order to find out the potential savings to the NHS if the recommendations of the Report were put into action.

The method used by Laing, who is regarded as a leading expert in this field, was as follows. He took the list of diet-related diseases from the James Report (columns one and two in the table) and then asked doctors and scientists to estimate to what extent these are caused by the food we eat (percentages in column three).

Among the experts who were consulted were Sir Richard Doll, emeritus professor of medicine at Oxford University, one of the two men who first linked smoking and cancer; Dr. Denis Burkitt, FRS; Professor Barry Lewis of St. Thomas's Hospital; Dr. Michael Marmot of the London School of Hygiene; Christopher Robbins of the Coronary Prevention Group; Dr. Aubrey Sheiham of the London Hospital; and Dr. Richard Turner of Edinburgh University.

GENERAL AGREEMENT

There was general agreement in the case of some diseases. Tooth decay, for example, was reckoned to be caused 100 per cent by eating refined sugar.

In other cases estimates varied. Heart diseases were reckoned to be caused 30 to 90 per cent by eating too much fat. Turner pointed out that incidence of heart disease in Japan is only one-sixth the British level, even though the Japanese suffer as much stress, and smoke more than we do. But they do eat much less fat.

As the totals in the table show, Laing's overall analysis indicates that the potential NHS savings, if the incidence of diet-related diseases in Britain were to be reduced by means of a healthier national diet, are between £881 and £1,541 million a year.

However, there is yet another cost not listed in the table. This concerns cancers in general. In a recent report in Which? magazine, Professor Doll said that "as much as one third of all cancers may be caused by the type of food we eat." And the DHSS agrees that "diet has a role in causing cancer."

If one attributes a third of the £419 million bill for all cancers, not listed in the table, the result is £140 million. When this is added to the lowest of Laing's figures – £881 million – the total to be trimmed from the NHS bill by a healthier diet comes to more than £1 billion a year.

But if the findings of the James Report indicate a big saving for the health service why has the Report been blocked by the Government? Why have the Tories sat on the Report for more than two years refusing even to admit that it exists?

Colonel Saunders looks at Junk Food

VESTED INTEREST

The answer is very simple. The Report's main opponents are, not surprisingly, the wealthy magnates of the food industry who have a vested interest in selling to the public the food which is killing them. And, again not surprisingly, some of these food industry magnates turn out to be Tory MPs!

Conservative MP Michael Shersby is director-general of the British Sugar Bureau, the food industry's lobby organisation. He said of the James Report: "It's a bit premature to comment on a report that doesn't exist."

And ex-Conservative MP Tim Fortescue, who is secretary-general of the Food and Drinks Industries Council, said the Report was "not relevant – it isn't yet approved," and described James's sub-committee as "that little group of acolytes that James assembled around him."

This then is the harsh reality of life in a Conservative Britain. Thousands of health service workers are being made redundant in order to "cut costs" while a report which indicates that major savings could be made without the need for redundancies is ignored and shovelled under the carpet.

FOOD BARONS

All of this is done so that a few rich food-barons can protect their income. Meanwhile thousands of people die every year from diet-related diseases . . .

One other thing needs to be said in conclusion and that concerns the very nature of the society in which we are being forced to live. The materialistic and highly automated lives which city-dwellers lead are unnatural and therefore also unhealthy. Urban man believes that the simple and natural things in life are somehow primitive whilst his own materialistic existence within an enormous and impersonal conurbation is seen as being civilised.

Modern materialistic man is the product of a Junk Culture. It is ironically appropriate that he should ultimately be killed by Junk Food.

RACE: What the Scientists Say

GREAT RACIAL SCIENTISTS

1. Dr. John R. Baker

THE CAREER of Dr. John Randal Baker, MA, DPhil, DSc(Oxon), FRS, is one of many that give the lie to the media smear that anyone who believes in inherited mental differences between the races of Man is a moronic bigot and semi-literate crank, devoid of any scientific foundation for his "racist fantasies".

J. R. Baker graduated in 1921 from New College, Oxford, with First Class Honours in Natural Sciences. The following year he took part in the first of his three scientific expeditions to the New Hebrides islands in the South Pacific. There ensued a most distinguished zoological career, spanning over fifty years and specialising in Cytology, the study of the structure and function of the cells out of which higher animals and plants are built up. Baker's researches found numerous practical applications in the field of human medicine. For example, in 1958 he was awarded the Oliver Bird Medal for his contributions in the field of chemical contraception. His work has also helped doctors fight infertility in childless couples.

In 1933, Dr. Baker published his textbook Cytological Techniques, which over the next thirty years was to run to five editions, a standard source for generations of biological and medical students, as was his 1958 work Principles of Biological Microtechnique. From 1946 to 1964 he edited the important Quarterly Journal of Microscopical Science, and from 1955 to 1967 held the leading academic post of Reader in Cytology at Oxford University. He was elected President of the Royal Microscopical Society for the year 1964-65, and in 1968 was further honoured by the Society with its Honorary Fellowship. But already, in 1958, Dr. Baker had been elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, a signal honour granted only to the most distinguished and brilliant British men of Science, the leading national figures in their field of study and research.

But it is for his contribution to the literature on human racial differences that he is important to us as Racial Nationalists. Ever since his first visit to the New Hebrides in 1922, Dr. Baker had been interested in physical anthropology, the study of the biological differences between different peoples around the world. And finally in 1974, after fifteen years devoted to researching the subject, his epochal volume Race was published by the Oxford University Press.

CLASSIC WORK

Baker's Race, which was highly praised by his fellow scientists such as leading biologist Sir Peter Medawar, is a classic work, the definitive statement of the state of scientific knowledge on this crucial topic. Minutely and exhaustively researched, every fact stated buttressed by an ample citation of the original references, this monumental work details and lucidly expounds the massive weight of hard scientific evidence which underlies the National Front's position on Race.

Here, in readable prose clearly intelligible not just to the specialist but to any educated layman, can be found the blunt, incontrovertible evidence that, for example, races differ markedly in inherited average intelligence; that the Negro, alone of all the major human races, has never produced a single civilisation of his own; and that the British people are not "a mongrel race" but on the contrary one of the more ethnically homogenous of nations.

He gives a clear exposition of the scientific meaning of the word "race", the extent of racial differences (so much more than merely "skin deep"), the racial nature of the British people and the sub-races of Europe, and the poverty of indigenous African Negro culture.

He also details the wealth of evidence from IQ and other tests which shows that intelligence differs markedly between human races, and that such differences are primarily inherited and hence essentially unchangeable.

BIOLOGICAL DIFFERENCES

He also, in a daring chapter on "The Jews", reveals the extent of the biological differences, extending not only to a distinctive physical appearance but even to blood groups, setting apart these aliens in our midst. Dr. Baker rightly points out that the biological differences between the Armenid and Ashkenazi Jews from Eastern Europe and the Orientalid Sephardi Jews of the Levant and Mediterranean are so great as to make it unlikely that they share any sort of common "Jewish race" identity. But he seems unaware of the researches of historians such as the Jew, Arthur Koestler, which demonstrate that this is due to the separate origin of the Ashkenazim amongst the Armenid Asiatic Khazar nomads of mediaeval Russia rather than the Biblical Israelites.

Dr. Baker is not afraid to draw the conclusion that races differ fundamentally in their inherited mental as well as physical attributes. But he deliberately leaves to others the political conclusions to be drawn from that fact. They are, of course, inescapable. If races are inherently unequal, then egalitarian multiracial societies can never work. And the policies of the National Front follow with an inescapable logical rigour, a rigour that in any intellectually honest person no amount of irrational prejudice against "wicked racism" inculcated by emotional conditioning, should be able to withstand.

Dr. John R. Baker is one of Britain's foremost biological scientists, whose researches have benefitted his fellow man in many ways. But perhaps his greatest contribution to posterity is his epoch-making work Race, in this writer's opinion the most comprehensive and authoritative work published on this vital topic to date. A topic on which it is no overstatement to say the whole future not just of our own nation but of our civilisation itself depends. Every NF member who wishes to understand thoroughly the question of Race, so central to our Party's ideology, should diligently study Dr. Baker's learned legacy. Trouble shooting

A RELIGION FOR RACIAL SURVIVAL

THERE has always been a school of thought within the racial-nationalist movement which holds that the root cause of the death-wish that grips European civilisation is Christianity (in all its forms and denominations).

The current High Priest – if I may so describe an atheist – of this school of thought among English-speaking racial-nationalists is the American scholar of classical and ancient languages and civilisations, Professor Revilo Oliver. He is the author of the booklet *Christianity – A Religion for Sheep and I understand that he is soon to have published a weightier tome which traces what he sees as the pernicious propositions of Christianity and several other religions back to Zoroastrianism.

Adherents of the Christian religion within the racial-nationalist movement seem to accept that the various established Christian churches are today enemies of the survival of European civilisation but, they say, this is not because the message of Christianity is fundamentally wrong but because the churches have been infiltrated and captured by elements which they variously describe as "humanists, heretics, crypto-communists and Jews."

I do not enter this debate to argue whether or not God does exist and, if so, which religion or denomination comes nearest to "The Truth" as I am an agnostic.

What I do hold to be certain is that European Man has, down the ages, established himself as Mankind's pre-eminent innovator in all fields of human endeavour – art, philosophy, music, law, architecture, science and technology – which distinguish homo sapiens from all other forms of life on this planet. This being so, I conclude that it is essential that European Man survives in circumstances which will enable him to continue to realise his unique creative potential.

Because of this, and because I am an agnostic, I evaluate religions not from any theological standpoint, but on the basis of the effect which they have on the capacity of European Man to survive in a world where there are 15 Black, Brown and Yellow men to every one White man, and where the numerical odds against the White man are widening all the time.

PERCEPTIONS OF CHRISTIANITY

Christian racial-nationalists can point to the history of the Christian churches during the past thousand years and more and claim that their faith and European civilisation, if not one and the same thing, established a symbiotic relationship. Christianity was perceived as being the religion of the White man.

But Christianity was not created for the exclusive spiritial or temporal benefit of the White man or his civilisation, but for the benefit of all Mankind. The Gospels and Epistles of the New Testament make it clear that Christianity is a universal religion.

The extent to which Christianity became in the past identified as an arm of European civilisation was not the product of fundamental doctrine (lately "subverted" by humanists, heretics, crypto-communists and Jews) but the product of an historical happenstance: the germination of the religion within the bowels of the Roman Empire and its propagation through the residual arteries of that empire which covered much of Europe. Thereafter, it was the project of the close involvement of the Roman Catholic and later Protestant churches with Europe's evolving kingdom and nation-state structures.

In relatively more recent times a wide variety of factors too numerous to itemise and debate here led to the increasing secularisation of governmental power in most European nations. This process more or less coincided with the 'discovery' by the Europe-based Christian churches of the teeming millions of Black, Brown and Yellow people who had been absorbed into the various European empires. A new era of mass conversion opened up for the Christian religion. The original universalist mission of Christianity was thus restored.

In the global Christian community of today, White people are a minority ethnic group who can expect no privileges. On the contrary, self-sacrifice to the point of self-destruction is the act of atonement they are now required to perform for daring to reach for the stars while others wallow in their own filth.

THE LAW OF STRUGGLE

It is an essential aspect of racial-nationalist belief that earthly life is an endless continuum of struggle; that Nature and History are entirely impartial between the combatants; and that so far from being an evil, endless struggle is the only means whereby life forms can achieve improvement and advancement.

Christianity teaches that this willing acceptance of struggle is sinful; that the brave and the brilliant must abandon the fruits of victory if they are to have a hope of entering the Kingdom of Heaven; and that the meek shall inherit the Earth (N.B. not just a heavenly reward).

The contrast between the two standpoints could not be more stark. It appears to me that they are irreconcilable.

It is for this reason that I feel that Christian racial-nationalists are mistaken when they claim that the Christian religion is not necessarily inimical to racial-nationalist belief, and that the conflict between the two creeds has only lately been manufactured by infiltrators. I believe that the "infiltrators" have, in fact, restored Christianity to its original founding principles after more than a millenium of adulteration within the crucible of European power-politics.

It is those fundamental principles, gift-wrapped in speciously idealistic "Brotherhood of Man" tinsel, which have infected European civilisation with a death-wish that is daily made more manifest. The symptoms of the infection and the ghastly death-agonies which it produces are nowhere better described than in Jean Respail's prophetic novel *Camp of the Saints.

O LUCKY JEWS!

How wise were the Jews to have devised for themselves a religion which, at least in its predominant Orthodox form, includes the following unique characteristics:–

1. It is for Jews only because their God designated them as his "Chosen People" who are one day destined to be Lords of the Earth.

2. It has no missionaries and seeks no converts. Conversion is possible but is made deliberately arduous so as to discourage the process.

3. It promotes among its adherents a contempt for non-Jews and their religions. In some of its rarely-translated-from-Hebrew explanatory texts this contempt dissolves into a ravening hatred.

4. It is a religion rooted in racial-nationalist principles. It inculcates among its adherents horror at the very thought of marriage to a non-Jew. It supports and is the official religion of a nation-state – Israel – which was created and which expands by force of arms and in which only Jews have a legal right to claim citizenship.

In short, the Jews devised for themselves a religion which has but one simple objective: to secure the survival, welfare and advancement of Jewry in the face of competition from all comers. Indeed, one can say that Judaism is Jewry worshipping itself.

It is because the Jews have an ethnocentric religion that they were able to survive as a nation for the best part of 2,000 years without a homeland within which to congregate – and in the face of "persecutions" (which they usually brought down on their own heads).

It is because we Europeans saddled ourselves with a universalist religion that we now face the loss of our race and the civilisation which it created, even though we have possessed the European heart-lands without interruption since prehistoric times.

Is this a call either for Christian racial-nationalists to set up their own denomination; or for Pagan racial-nationalists to revive one or another – or a synthesis – of the Old Religions; or for Atheist racial-nationalists to mobilise a campaign against all religious belief? I cannot tell, for I am an agnostic in matters of religion. Let those who are certain of the existence/non-existence of God or Gods bestir themselves as best they will. I wish them all well.

INVASION

Dear Sir,

The Island of Sri Lanka is the one and only home of the Singhalese. The Tamils are Indians who have invaded over the centuries. They came, not with bows and arrows or guns and tanks but with smiles and jingling money bags.

The happy-go-lucky, easy going Singhalese were no match for the sharp, business-like people who are linked with India and not Sri Lanka, so that now the Tamils control two thirds of the Island and most of the business.

But strong business acumen is based on greed and that can never be satisfied. So the Tamils demanded more and more and now insist that the Singhalese Island be divided and they be given control over the Northern half with their own government and army.

When they began to use violence in the shape of "the tigers" then, and only then, did the Singhalese rise up as best they could without arms.

Mild looking gentle smiling invaders should be seen for what they are, intruders through the back door, and kept strictly at bay from the start.

Those that welcome or support them are purely and simply quislings.

The programme is always the same. As the numbers of the invaders increase so do their demands until they take over part, or all, of the invaded territory.

It has happened in a lot of different parts of the world. It is happening here.

TERRORISM

Dear NT,

It is a great shame that Martin Webster marred his otherwise entertaining 'Trouble-shooting' series with his article: "An Invitation to Terrorism". It was a politically immature piece that demonstrated a gross misunderstanding of both the present state of British Nationalism and of its advance.

The root cause of this misunderstanding is the implied belief that marches, press statements and elections are the only valid and effective means of promoting our Cause; this perspective naturally maintains that should these means be denied us, our only alternative is terrorism. Even if this analysis was totally correct, it was counter-productive penning the article, for publication merely forewarns the Establishment; the fact that the analysis is way off beam serves only to compound the error.

One has only to look superficially at the suppression of Italian Nationalism over the past decade or so to realise that terrorism is only the answer for those with a death wish. The armed struggle engaged in by Italian nationalists led, not to the overthrow of the bourgeois capitalist state, or even to its mortal destabilisation, but to political bans, mass imprisonment, torture and wholesale murder. We must learn from this tragic episode and apply the lessons of our study to our situation.

Throughout the 1970's the NF acted as though the road to power were a one way street – marches, elections, Parliament, Power. The party clung to this approach as though it were Holy Writ and shunned the development of alternative and complementary strategies. The repressive actions of the State have proven the shallowness of this approach: now is the time for serious analysis and reflection, not veiled hints at terrorism.

Any study of History will show that Nationalist populations do not achieve power through terrorism; on the contrary this tactic is resolutely avoided. All National Revolutions have been prepared through the development of a cultural revival, a revival that ties the people to Soil, Identity and Tradition – what has the NF done in this direction? Nothing, but a few impotent AGM resolutions. We need to expend effort in regaining our cultural identity; we need to develop our approach in the Unions and the professions; we need to promote our ideas, via specialist leaflets and pamphlets, in the Church, in agriculture, in small industry. There is so much that can be legitimately done in these and other areas that talk of terrorism being the only way forward is facile and destructive.

Surely, if our advance on a narrow front, the election-march front, is blocked by the Enemy, the answer is not to invite suicide through terrorist action, but to expand the front on which we fight, thereby disorientating our opponents who have become thoroughly conversant with our old (and now defunct) tactics. Change our tactics and we change our political potential. New initiatives, new structures, new methods are the way to National Revolution; terrorism is the short cut to Boot Hill.

Yours respectfully,

Derek Holland
Sevenoaks, Kent.

HEALTH SERVICE

Dear Nationalism Today,

Working for the NHS I am concerned with the ever increasing flood of Black and Asian immigrant patients moving every day on to our already crowded GPs' lists, without having paid a penny in NHS contributions.

They pack our doctors' waiting rooms outnumbering our own white and mainly elderly patients who have contributed to the NHS most of their working lives. Our patriots who have to deal with this blight have to tolerate on one hand arrogance, abuse and personal threats when they can't be seen immediately and on the other hand a self-righteous band of gullible, misled Whites all so very eager to assist any poor helpless immigrant who by his very presence contaminates our country.

This drain on the NHS must be stopped and fought with the only weapon we have left, the policies of the National Front.

Miss L. Kennedy
Brighton, E. Sussex

EIRE

Dear Sir,

The National Front election manifesto, "Let Britain Live" expressed the hope that the British people would one day be reunited, in other words that Eire would return to the British Union. In my opinion this is the only viable long term solution to the civil war and I was delighted to see this in the manifesto. Why no mention of it in your Ulster supplement? Surely it is a most crucial part of NF policy to Northern Ireland; it should not be brushed under the carpet.

Yours faithfully,

Michael Walker,

THOUGHT-PROVOKING

Sir:

The multi-colour NT number 16 was a fine effort; I enclose £1 to help defray the added printing costs. "Revolutionaries of the 'Left' " by John Field was the best set-piece statement yet produced by White social-nationalists.

I've a quarrel, however, with a few assertions made in "Patriots of the 'Right' ".

1. America did not destroy the British Empire. Britain self-destructed by its fratricidal war on Germany. By 1916, the German Army had effectively destroyed the British Army (as well as French and Russian). Only a deal made with Zionism (the Balfour Declaration) brought in the massive US involvement – financial and military – which turned the tide against the Kaiser. Deals must be paid for. Britain began hocking the Empire in the 1920's. In 1940, the German Army repeated its destruction of the British (and French) Army, and only Hitler's insane crusade against Russia gave the Zionists sufficient time to inveigle the isolationist Americans into a second conflict. That deal had to be paid for too.

2. What right had Britain, Israel and France to invade Egypt over the nationalisation of the Suez? For all his faults, Nasser – along with the Syrian nationalists – constructed the only effective front against World Zionism.

3. White nationalists "abroad" support the rights of the Ulster Loyalists. However, we also know that the 1922 agreement which set up British Ulster and the Irish Free State clearly stipulated that further border rectification was needed to transfer additional areas of Ulster with majority Irish-Catholic populations to the Republic.

Sincerely,

To flea or not to flea

DURING an interview, Professor Okabaguchi said: "My childish days were passed in wondering whether I should become a soldier or an artist. Then, one day, I saw a flea through a microscope and my fate was decided. Clarified and sealed in whiskey-coloured Canadian balsam nothing is more charming and beautiful than a flea. I took to roaming the mountains of Japan in search of new fleas, and, prior to losing an eye in the marshes of Cambodia, I introduced 70 new kinds of flea to the civilised world – among them those of the Great Brown Bear. In the 21 years following my disablement only 4 new fleas have been discovered. Few creatures are more efficient than the human flea. Abandoning its wings, it locates itself on a mountain of food, after which, and no doubt because of the rubber-like consistency of its habitat it developed the capacity to leap 3,000 yards in proportion to the body-weight of its host. A remarkable feat. I have written a novel about fleas and my dream is that this text will be turned into a film. It is little short of a national tragedy that the human flea has almost vanished from Japan. We have lost a beautiful friend. A monument to a successful human relationship."

Soapy Sambo

THE latest craze amongst the primitive aborigines of northern Australia is eating soap powder. In a recent issue of the British Medical Journal two typical cases are reported by an Australian doctor.

Both cases involved young female aborigines, aged 15 and 16, who had been eating "Rinso" soap powder by the handful. Both recovered, though one required hospital treatment.

They are described by the doctor as "high spirited chums" who, "not to be outclassed by their petrol-sniffing companions, had adopted the practice of eating soap powder. After experimentation, the group of aborigines agreed that 'Rinso' was the preferred product."

Shove the Dove

HOLDER of the "Josef Stalin Award For Peace" and the "Lavrenti Beria Cup For Social Responsibility", Monseigneur Bruce Bent of "Traitors For Nuclear Disarmament" has announced that more demonstrations should be held soon. The new campaign will be under the slogan of "Bourgeois Know-alls Against The Bomb", and their leader hopes that even more sexually-indeterminate weirdoes will turn out to attend.

Monseigneur Bent then went on to hotly deny that his organisation harmed Britain. He claimed that his members were only interested in peace and the price of soya beans. He felt that too much was made of his appearances in the Soviet media and the few thousand communists in the movement.

Monseigneur Bent believes the Russians will disarm because they told him they would . . . providing we do it first. He said that he did not doubt their sincerity for peace as they had just donated two million pounds to the movement.

Thumbs Up

"THE embalmed thumb fraud has been costing the Government over a million dollars a year. The rogues amputate the thumbs of dead pensioners who lived in India, mark their pension-books with the thumb-print, and continue to draw their pensions. When we discovered this dreadful crime, 567 pensioners died of a mysterious epidemic in three days. One pensioner had been drawing his stipend since 1862, and had been featured in the Calcutta Herald as the oldest man on earth. But his address was a cinema. You must expect that sort of thing from Indians."

MERIDEN—Murdered by Imports

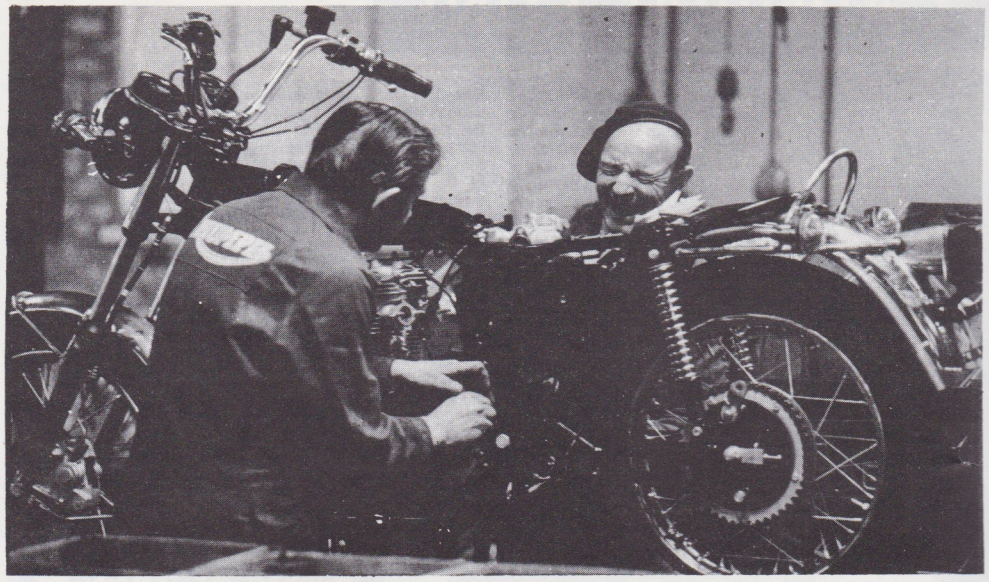
THE COLLAPSE of the Meriden Motorcycle Co-operative has been given wide coverage by the Tory press, which has been quick to use it as an opportunity to put the boot into the whole idea of producers' co-ops.

The newspapers have tried to give the impression that the firm's failure was in some way linked to its being a co-op. Nothing could be further from the truth. The fact is that the Meriden co-operative was only set up after the original capitalist Triumph motorcycle company collapsed under the pressure of bad industrial relations and, more damaging still, the flood of cheap Japanese bikes which destroyed the market.

Motorcycle manufacture is a classic example of a once-thriving industry being murdered by unfair foreign competition. Without import controls and other protective measures, no British company, not even a co-operative, stands a chance.

The failure of the Meriden venture is therefore not an argument against workers' co-ops. Many others have been set up in recent years and are thriving concerns, often doing much better than their strife-ridden capitalist predecessors.

In fact, the final end of serious motorcycle manufacture in Britain is simply one more example of the impact of the Establishment's free-trade policy. It might provide big profits for a handful of City banks and speculators, but it means collapse and disaster for British industry and the British worker.



Happier days at the Meriden producers' co-operative.

THE TORIES MUST GO!

BRITAIN will remain stuck in a "rut of high unemployment" with the number of people on the dole averaging three million for the rest of the decade.

This was the view of a study made by the University of Warwick Institute for Employment Research on the disastrous effects of Tory economic policy.

Such policies will cause an inflation rate of about 6 per-cent and would also mean the loss of 1.7 million manual worker jobs by 1990. There will also be large job losses amongst Britain's non-engineering craftsmen and labourers.

From this report the message is clear: Thatcher and the Tories must go — before they ruin Britain!

Sucking Britain dry

AS British firms went bust at a record rate last year, the surviving UK companies were investing £10,000 million in expanding industry and creating new jobs . . . in America!

British capitalists led the league table of foreign business investors in the US last year, with 63 major new investments. The biggest British investor in the US, British Petroleum, helpfully built the Americans a bigger copper mine in New Mexico and a petro-chemical plant in Ohio, amongst numerous other ventures.

It is clearly absurd that wealth generated by British workers should be shipped abroad to benefit the economies of foreign countries when it is desperately needed here. How many new jobs could that £10,000 million of British money have created in Britain? But such export of capital is an inherent part of the system of international Capitalism. For over a century, international plutocrats have been extracting profits from British workers and spending them on benefitting foreigners at our expense. Only the total overthrow of Capitalism can end this vampire-like draining away of our nation's economic lifeblood.

TRADE UNIONISTS!

This series of articles by Ian Anderson describes some of the more interesting and unusual political activities of National Front members. While all the facts are true, the identities of some individuals have been changed for reasons that will become obvious.

IN December 1981 Ian Mikardo, the well-known 'Israel patriot' and then Member of Parliament for Bethnal Green and Bow, was due to tell the people of Tunbridge Wells, Kent, of his views on the future of Northern Ireland.

Local members of the National Front heard about this public meeting which was to be held in the Labour Hall in Tunbridge Wells. They decided to go along to tell Mr. Mikardo that, as far as most patriotic British people are concerned, Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom and will remain so for ever.

One local member, whom we shall call David, decided to go one better. Shrugging off his usual immaculate appearance, he pulled his hair forward to hang over his face, he acquired a really shabby raincoat from a local Oxfam shop, and borrowed a large, impressive looking camera with a flashgun attachment from a friend.

Thus attired as a typical well-heeled Fleet Street reporter, our friend Dave entered the Labour Hall and walked up the narrow flight of stairs which lead to the main Hall. He approached one of the stewards:

Dave: "Is it possible to have a few words with Mr. Mikardo?"

Steward: "Oh, you're with the Press."

Dave: "Not exactly, I do freelance work for Southern Television."

On hearing the magic word "television" the ecstatic steward dashed off to Mr. Mikardo and bustled him back to our 'photographer' Dave with the words: "Southern Television is here to take photographs."

Putting on his best approximation of a smile, Mr. Mikardo shook Dave's hand: "Thank you so much for coming."

Dave then took a few shots of Ian Mikardo – unfortunately only with his camera – thanked Mr. Mikardo for his time and told him that he would be taking a few pictures of the meeting.

By this time the meeting was nearly ready to start with an audience of about 80. However, unknown to either Mr. Mikardo or to the organisers of the meeting, over 30 of these were members of the National Front.

ANTI-BRITISH DIATRIBE

The meeting was badly organised and there was no warm-up speaker. The chairman simply stood up, introduced Mr. Mikardo and sat down. Mr. Mikardo launched into his anti-British diatribe but was somewhat disconcerted to find that, far from listening with rapt attention, a number of his audience clearly disagreed with what he was saying and started to vociferously heckle him.

Our friend Dave was wandering around the room, amongst the audience, behind the platform, occasionally firing off his flashgun and occasionally encountering hostile glances from the NF members in the audience, none of whom had recognised this 'hairy, lefty photographer' as one of their own.

After about 15 minutes Mr. Mikardo, who was tearing into the effrontery of the Ulster Loyalists in fighting for their country, was having difficulty in being heard. It was at this stage that a small device made its dramatic entry into the middle of a group of rather dirty Labour Party Young Socialists, several of whom would claim to be female.

The device immediately started to emit large volumes of smoke. Seizing his chance, our photographer shouted at the top of his voice: "It's a bomb! It's a bomb! Clear the room!"

This warning, given by an 'independent' photographer, was immediately believed. The young gentlemen of the LPYS instantly demonstrated their gallantry by elbowing their female comrades out of their way and then trampling over them in their headlong dash for the exit. The doors and stairs down were rapidly jammed with heroes of the revolution, and only after they had rushed out did the NF members quietly exit from the hall.

Our friend Dave had earlier spotted a fire exit hidden behind a curtain and had also quietly taken his leave of the meeting, shortly followed by Mr. Mikardo. Outside the hall the Labour Party supporters started to drift away, while one of the organisers of the meeting loudly demanded to know who was that "bloody photographer" who had caused all the panic.

By the time the hall was cleared of smoke both Mr. Mikardo and his audience had disappeared leaving the Organiser to fume quietly to himself about the evening's fiasco.

Dave was some way away from the hall when he saw the ambulance that was needed to take away two of the Reds who had been hurt in the flight from the hall. Later that evening he returned the camera to his friend who was still somewhat puzzled as to why anyone should want to borrow a camera but had no interest in the type of film to be used.

Ian Mikardo was allowed just 15 minutes to attack Britain before NF members took matters into their own hands.

BRITAIN'S WAR DEAD BETRAYED

OVER one million British people were killed in two World Wars believing that they were fighting to preserve the freedom and identity of the British Nation.

They fought and died in every continent and every climate – in the mud of Western Europe, on the beaches of Gallipoli, in the jungles of Asia, in the deserts of North Africa, in the air and in the icy waters of the Arctic Ocean.

As British Nationalists we honour the sacrifice they made, and pay homage to their memory on Remembrance Day. But how dare Establishment politicians of the Tory, Labour and Liberal/SDP Alliance try to do the same?

Those who died were told that they were fighting for Britain. Now we've got millions of unwanted foreigners, political sovereignty has passed from Westminster to Brussels, and our loyal kinsmen in Ulster and Southern Africa who fought alongside us have been betrayed.

Those who died were told they were fighting to "make the World safe for Democracy", but there's no Democracy in Eastern Europe, and the West is little more than a plutocracy.

Britain has slipped to a fifth rate power while the Poles – whose freedom we supposedly went to war over – are enslaved by a regime which was once Nazi Germany's ally.

If those who died in the two World Wars could have foreseen the outcome for our Race and Nation, they would have turned their guns on the traitors comfortably ensconced in Whitehall!

Those who survived must not only realise that what they were fighting for has been betrayed, but must also begin to ask why they were fighting at all. The forces which gained most from the World Wars – Capitalism, Communism and Zionism – are, after all, the very forces that are now trying to destroy us today.

The enemies we face today are not without but within. They are harder to identify but equally as menacing.

Those fighting against them cannot expect to be acclaimed as heroes. They have no memorials – nor do they seek any. They do not yet have a united Nation behind them. For the moment they must face villification, discrimination and hostility from the enemies of this country who hold the reins of power.

But they will go on fighting, safe in the knowledge that this time they really are fighting for no other cause than that of the British Race and Nation!

Britain's war dead have been betrayed – but the fight goes on!

OBITUARY

BERYL MITCHELL

DURING September the National Front lost the services of one of its most devoted workers when Beryl Mitchell died at her family home in Surrey.

Mrs. Mitchell was a tireless worker for the Nationalist cause and the NF will be forever in her debt for the efforts she made to help the Party recover following the splits which beset us after the 1979 General Election.

Beryl Mitchell joined the National Front in the early 1970s and from that moment on she was always willing to help the cause she loved in any way she could. From 1976 she was a full time employee of the Party, becoming known to most NF members as the woman on the end of the phone whenever they telephoned Head Office. She was forced to retire from full-time Nationalist politics in 1981 when ill-health took its toll, but she remained steadfastly loyal to the Party right until the end.

Beryl Mitchell will be remembered by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.
